United Press Telegram.
WAUKESHA, Ill., July 18.—Swearing to put everyone implicated in the case behind the bars, John H. Richardson, a storekeeper of Volo, swore out warrants this morning for the arrest of 50 women of that place, who are charged with kidnapping his wife, riding her on a rail and then throwing her into a sea of mud.

"We were living happily together, and now they have driven her away," screamed the little cripple from the depths of his wheeled chair, as he started making the information. "There was no trouble between my wife and brother-in-law."

The news of the affair, which occurred two days ago, was carefully guarded. Nothing was revealed until today, when Richardson came here and placed a mortgage for $1,500 on his store. This money he gave to his wife, and placed her aboard a train for Chicago.

William Dunhill, the man in the case, has come to Colorado and nothing is known of him. According to the story told by Richardson, the women kidnaped his wife, stripped nearly all of her clothes from her body, placed her on a rail and, while they were carrying her through Volo, threw rocks at her.

After they had finished with the woman, they dumped her into a mud pond and returned to the Dunhill residence to get the man in the case. Their husbands promised to get him interested so that he would be easy to handle, but Dunhill refused to drink, and disappeared.

EIGHT HURT IN WRECKTrains on Lake Shore Crash Near Painesville, O.

United Press Telegram.
CLEVELAND, July 18.—Eight were injured and 100 passengers narrowly escaped death this morning when a Lake Shore passenger train collided with a mail train, telegraphing a dining car, near Painesville. A special relief train from Cleveland made record time to the wreck, and brought the injured to the Glenview hospital here.

Lake Shore officials are investigating in an effort to learn who is at fault for not flagging the passenger train. Flagmen were sent out behind the wreck and stopped the Twentieth Century Limited in time to prevent a more serious accident. The Limited train was delayed for only a short time. The wreckage was cleared away from one of the tracks, and then it continued on its way.

Conductor Sankley of Collingswood, and his fireman, escaped unhurt, although their engine plowed half-way into the dining car.

NEW LAKE ERIE RATE MAY NOT BE PUT INTO EFFECT*Shippers of Pittsburgh and Wheeling Districts Expected to Ask Further Cut.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Independent shippers of iron ore from Lake Erie ports to Pittsburgh and the Wheeling district are prepared to resist the rate of 33 cents a ton, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. At Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the Pittsburgh, Des Moines & Lake Erie roads filed similar rates.

A suspension of the proposed new rate, in all probability, be asked by the Pittsburgh Steel Company and the various manufacturers of the Wheeling district. It is generally conceded by those in touch with the rate situation in Pittsburgh that the reduction of but eight cents a ton from the prevailing rate of 38 cents will be of little assistance to the independent shippers. The United States Steel Corporation carrying half of its 11,000,000 tons of ore over its own road at a cost of between 28 and 30 cents a ton, a lower rate than the latest tariff of the railroads is asked. Sixty cents was the figure hoped for by the shippers.

It is the belief of many persons that the 38-cent rate will not become effective on August 16, the date originally set by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Following the objections of the shippers a further investigation may be ordered.

PARDON FOR E. H. STINEMANPresident Promises Clemency for Mount Pleasant Man.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—E. H. Stinemann, a former business man of Mount Pleasant, serving a sentence in the Leavenworth Penitentiary for complicity in the failure of the First National Bank of Mount Pleasant three years ago, will be pardoned by President Wilson. This fact became known following a visit to the White House and the Department of Justice by Representative Stephen G. Porter. Stinemann was eligible for parole last January, but his freedom has been delayed by a technicality which the Department of Justice could not disregard. It is understood that the President assured Mr. Porter that the case would be given his prompt attention when it was sent to the White House by Attorney General McReynolds. Mr. McReynolds is said to have agreed with Mr. Porter that Stinemann's sentence was excessive and that he deserved clemency.

WILL CUT BIG MELONTo Distribute $5,000,000 Among Express Company Stockholders.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The directors of the American Express Company have decided to distribute among the stockholders of the company 25,000 shares of stock of Wells Fargo & Company, with a market value of nearly $5,000,000 which has been held by the company for several years.

As there are 150,000 shares of American Express stock, the directors of Wells Fargo will be allotted for each four shares of the American Express company's stock. The American Express Company obtained the stock several years ago, when it was purchased as part of an agreement whereby it contracted with the Union Pacific railroad for extension of its service over that line.

tend That Old Third Class City Law partisan List; Remer for Burgess.

The stage has been set for the test of the Clark commission government bill and the attorneys have been assigned their parts in the proceedings. An official stage manager and general overseer of the proceedings, Attorney Higbee has directed the cases which the volunteer attorneys are to prepare.

Mr. Higbee and S. R. Goldsmith will fight for a favorable interpretation of the Clark bill as applicable to Connellsville, and will formally represent H. O. Keagy, who has prepared a petition for mayor on a non-partisan ballot, and Alvin Plorant, candidate for council under the same measure.

To Borough Solicitor F. D. Munson has been given the task of showing that the Clark bill is unconstitutional, and that the act of 1889 is still in full force and effect. Mr. Munson will appear as counsel for F. R. Graham, candidate for select council from the Fifth ward. Attorney L. G. May, while contending that the Clark bill is unconstitutional, will also represent E. J. Vanatta's contention that the nonpartisan ballot is unconstitutional. Vanatta appears in the litigation as a candidate for mayor on the Washington party ticket.

Attorney J. K. Remer will argue in behalf of John B. Davis, a candidate for Burgess, that Connellsville is not a city; that its charter is invalid and that, therefore, the election should be held for borough officers. The outcome of the litigation, because of the variety of points raised, is being watched with interest in all third class cities of the state. If the case goes to the Supreme Court, a decision there will vitally affect each of these towns.

The check will be apportioned among the men at the rate of eight days' pay. The check will amount to $287.50.

Captain Kidd stated today that members of the company who have not qualified on the rifle range and those who have neglected to return to the quartermaster's department their equipment, will not receive checks until they do. Captain Kidd hopes that every man will spend as much time as possible on the range to improve their shooting. He believed that the standing of the company can be improved.

MORE LAYOFFSExpected That West Penn Will Add
Them to Payroll in Fall.

Several additional men have been laid off here by the West Penn, according to announcement made this morning. Following the furlough to 40 men employed at the laboratory and in the works on the West Side, the batchet was fallen on the heads of four employed in the office of the construction department and on 22 engaged in outside construction work. These men are under the supervision of A. N. Cartright, superintendent of power, and were in the meter department.

In the fall, it is believed, new construction will be started, and that many of the men who were laid off yesterday and today, will be re-employed.

ARREST TWO ON CHARGE OF ROBBERY; SEEK A THIRD*Former Employee One of Those Held for Breaking into the Solosoa Box Office.

Two have been arrested and the apprehension of a third man implicated in the robbery of the Solosoa Theatre early Thursday morning is expected today. One of those under arrest confessed, implicating his companions. As a result of the confession, Thomas Whitman, a former employee of the theatre, was held in the lockup today, awaiting transportation to Uniontown in default of $500 bail.

Taken before Squire Lawrence Donegan this morning, Constable Mitchell claims, Whitman did not deny being a partner in the robbery, but said he was drunk and was unaware of what he was doing.

The $500 taken from the cash box that had been placed in the little ticket room by the cashier, was divided between the trio. Each secured $20 as his share of the booty. The broken cash box has been found. It was located under the bridge at Trump run, where it had been thrown by the thieves. The arrests were made by Constable J. W. Mitchell.

RAIN INTERFERESDinner to Directors at Y. M. C. A.

It is expected that there will be a large number of visitors at the camp Saturday night and Sunday.

THE TERMINAL HERE*Baltimore & Ohio Officials
Make Periodic Trip
Over System.*FIRST TRIP SINCE LAST MARCH*Men in Charge of Big System Go West
From Here and Will See the Work of Rehabilitation Which They Directed on Previous Visit to Ohio.

A party of general officers of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad visited Connellsville this morning while on an inspection trip and spent some time looking over the local terminals. The railroad officials are on a periodic inspection of the railway system. President Daniel Willard headed the party, and accompanying him were the officers of his operating staff.

The inspection was made by special train, composed of official cars of the company. The party left Baltimore yesterday morning and stopped last night at Rockwood. The railroad men will continue west to Chicago, stopping at Pittsburgh, Cleveland and intermediate points to go over the yards, terminals and shops. From Chicago they will go to Saint Louis, resuming the inspection from there east and going over the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad, which is a part of the Baltimore & Ohio system.

Vice-President A. W. Thompson, chief operating officer of the company, General Manager C. W. Galloway, Chief Engineer F. L. Stuart and F. H. Clark, general superintendent of motive power, were with President Willard. The party will be joined by the officials of their staffs during the trip.

The inspection tours of the general officers are made at regular intervals for the purpose of going over improvements under way and examining operating conditions. This is the first inspection since the floods in March, at which time President Willard, Vice-President Thompson and Chief Engineer Stuart spent some time in the flood districts directing the work of restoring the lines so that train service could be resumed.

Those in the Baltimore & Ohio inspection party are President Daniel Willard; A. W. Thompson, third vice-president, chief operating officer; C. W. Galloway, general manager; G. H. Campbell, assistant to president; F. L. Stuart, chief engineer; F. H. Clark, general superintendent of motive power; J. D. McCubbin, Jr., real estate agent; P. F. Paterson, signal engineer; E. A. Peck, general superintendent; C. L. French, superintendent; Paul Dildier, principal assistant engineer; J. A. Spielman, district engineer of maintenance of way; A. P. Sparks, secretary to chief engineer; J. T. Burns, secretary to third vice-president; E. R. Briggs, secretary to general manager; J. D. Dobson, secretary to general superintendent of motive power; J. W. Ford, secretary to engineer of maintenance of way.

The staff of local railroad officials accompanied the general officers over this division.

DISCUSSION ON SCHOOLSMunicipal League Will Entertain the Directors Tonight.

The Municipal League meeting tonight will have an interesting subject for discussion. The crowded condition of the schools is one of the hardest nuts the school board has had to crack this year, and several members of the board will likely be in attendance to air their side of the case. President J. B. Young stated today that he intends attending, and is probable that he will have something interesting to say. Mr. Youngkin also stated that several of his associate members on the board will accept the invitation of President W. S. Roberts and be present.

On account of the interest shown by many of the Fourth ward residents in the move to change their children from the Fourth ward building to the South Side, it is anticipated that many of them will make an effort to secure enlightenment on the subject.

CHILD IS ABUSEDGreensburg Authorities Find Little Girl Bound in Chains.

United Press Telegram.
GREENSBURG, July 18.—Police-men and humanitarian officers who found the 10-year-old daughter of George Geiss and wife wearing heavy iron chains fastened to a wooden block are at a loss today as to what procedure to follow. Arrest of the pair will only make the future harder for the child, they point out.

When Humane Officer Harry Hazlett discovered the girl, she was suffering from bruises about the wrists and legs where the heavy chains pressed into the flesh.

Geiss is under suspended sentence for cruelty to one of his sons. When discovered some time ago the boy was strung up by the thumbs as punishment for some childish prank.

Street Car Man Dies.ALTOONA, July 18.—William H.
Ruston, aged 38, prominent in electric railway affairs died here today.*BIG COAL ACREAGE BOUGHT BY PITTSBURG OPERATORS*They Acquire 900 Acres of the Pittsburg Seam in Washington County.

A coal land purchase of unusual importance was consummated yesterday by which a little more than 900 acres of Pittsburgh vein coal passed into new hands, with the immediate prospect of development on a large scale. The amount involved is said to be $300 an acre, or a total of $270,000. The improvements the deal will reach $1,000,000.

The coal consists of two blocks. One piece was held by Walker & Taylor as an investment, back of Monongahela City along the Pigeon creek branch of the Pennsylvania railroad which runs to Ellsworth, and contains 650 acres. The other is a lot of 258 acres adjoining it which was owned by the Ellsworth Collieries Company and which was obtained by a trade for acreage more advantageous to the Ellsworth Company.

As the property is between the holdings of the Steel Corporation, being that portion formerly owned by the Mingo Coal Company, while the extensive acreage of the Pittsburgh-Westmoreland Coal Company is on the other side of the property, it is on the part of the market.

Interesting details of the transaction show that the property is the last block of undeveloped coal in that region, which has been under active development. It was supposed that the Steel Corporation interests had an option on the property and that it was out of the market.

The acreage is in Washington county, center of interest generally because of the developments of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in extending and the development of many new plants in the upper end of the field.

PURIFYING STREAMSManufacturers Filter Discharge from Plants at Order of State Fisheries.

Commissioner of Fisheries N. B. Buller, who has completed a tour of inspection of streams of the state polluted by manufacturing wastes, says manufacturers are showing a spirit of co-operation toward the department's plan of purifying streams. A score of plants are taking steps toward alteration of discharges.

It is less than a year since the department undertook to bring to the attention of the tanning, textile, paper, iron and steel and other industrial interests of the state the extent of the pollution of streams and comparatively few prosecutions have been necessary to obtain compliance with the orders of the commissioner.

In most instances the manufacturers are anxious to ask for time to work out plans and this was granted readily. The policy of the department is to procure agreements to filter wastes and the state is to be systematically inspected.

MELLEN RESIGNSQuits as Head of the New England Railroad Monopoly.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Charles S. Mellen has tendered his resignation as president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and its allied or subsidiary lines, including the various railways, trolley lines and water lines which have become part of the New Haven system under his management.

Announcement of Mr. Mellen's resignation, which is to take effect "at the pleasure" of the New Haven board, but "in no event later than October 1," followed a long meeting of the directors.

In railroad and financial circles Mr. Mellen's decision will excite no surprise. In fact, during the day in Wall Street and elsewhere it was generally understood that the day would mark virtually the end of the Mellen administration.

BATTLE ROYALScottdale Comes Tomorrow for a Tit
With Cokers.

The Cokers will meet Scottdale on Fayette field tomorrow afternoon. The game will be called promptly at 3 o'clock and it is expected that the most important game on the local schedule will be witnessed by one of the largest crowds of the season.

Scottdale defeated Connellville in the game played on their grounds several weeks ago, and for this reason as much as any other, the Cokers desire to defeat them here.

Silcox will probably do the hurting for the locals. He announced after the Scottdale game that he would face the Mill Town team when it appeared here.

PLENTY OF GAS.Exports Say Supply Will Last for Another Century.

Pittsburg experts are of opinion that the natural gas supply of the district will last probably for another century. In addition to the present wells showing no signs of exhaustion, new holes have been tapped.

One of the most important of these is a 3,500,000-foot gas well. Just brought in at Trafford City, virtually virgin territory. It is expected that other rich wells will be found in Westmoreland county, and hopes are high that tests in the Smithfield district will prove successful.

FRIEL OUTWITS HIS OPPONENTS; BALKS
PLOT TO OUST HIM*Adjourns Council Until Next Month While Opponents are Napping.*CURBSTONE ORATORY IS FATAL*While Ousters Debate on the Outside President Calls Meeting to Order, Finds No Quorum Present and Then Ties Things Up Three Weeks.

Frank Friel is still president of council. He outwitted the ousters and caught them napping. As a consequence the insurgents, who with cross-band tactics loudly proclaimed that they would throw the president out of the chair at last night's meeting, are being ridiculed for their pains.

President Friel executed a neat piece of maneuvering, outguessing and outplaying the insurgents in spite of adverse numbers. He may be ousted yet, but the odds are now against it. The insurgents, it is believed in well-informed circles, let their best chance slip. It will be three weeks until the next meeting, and in that time many things can happen. One thing seems certain, the Friel forces will not lose by the delay.

It was quick work that beat the opposition. Councilmen gathered slowly at city hall up until a few minutes before 8 o'clock. Then they came in droves. Councilman William McCormick is generally credited with leading the anti-Friel faction. He was on the ground early. So were his supporters. They stopped in the public square to gossip, and thereby cast their chances in the discard.

Although apparently mustering 10 men to 7 for the Friel faction, the anti-Friel councilmen hovered outside, waiting for Councilman W. A. Bishop to arrive. He came after the battle was lost.

Promptly on the stroke of 8, President Friel, who with six other councilmen had gone to the chamber, rapped for order and directed the official. Clerk Bixler reported seven present, Friel, Kooser, Hetzel, Brennan, Gilmore, Decker and Hay.

Friel announced there was no quorum and immediately Councilman Brennan moved an adjournment until next meeting night. The motion was seconded. There was a clattering of footsteps as Friel put the motion, but his haste was unnecessary. The new arrivals were spectators and arrived in the room in time to hear the chorus of yays that approved the motion.

The councilman fled out and reached the pavement about the time Friel Atarschal McCormick was ready to lead his forces into the building. The insurgents made no effort to conceal their expressions of disgust. It is even said that McCormick's colleague, B. L. Berg, openly voiced his disgust at McCormick's management of the affair.

"Why didn't he go into the meeting instead of standing out here talking about it?" Friel quipped.

The folly of the opposition's course is clear. With the vote of 10 to 7 McCormick's men could have prevented an adjournment until the arrival of their missing colleague. However, even if they had done this, Burns, who was primed to step into the chair, did not seem to have thought of this, or if he did, his suggestion was discarded.

McCormick declared the proceedings irregular because Friel called the meeting to order before the meeting but Clerk A. O. Eixler, a staunch Democrat, says it was one minute after 8 o'clock when he finished calling the roll. The called-the-meeting-too-early excuse wasn't accepted by the large crowd of spectators which gathered to see the fun. The ousters gained scant sympathy for their blundering.

With Councilman II. C. Hays absent in the east, and only seven members on hand, the Friel forces were easily defeated. The insurgents were called to order, and business transacted, the anti-Friel faction would have controlled the situation, even if they had lacked a majority and failed to oust the president. They had nothing to lose and everything to gain by going into the meeting, while the only chance the Friel followers had last night was to prevent a meeting. They turned the trick neatly and with dispatch.

That is the reason the belief exists that the anti-Friel movement has fizzled. There is every indication that the insurgents are at odds and lack the leadership necessary to hold a coherent working force for the next three weeks. It will be another story on August 7, the Friel forces declare. Efforts for a compromise failed the evening previous. Several of the anti-Friel members, it is asserted, losing confidence in the ouster movement, made an offer to support Kooser for

DEMOCRATS PLAY POLITICS

Charges Made Against Majority Members of Lobby Committee.

United Press Telegram.
WASHINGTON, July 18.—The charge that the Democratic members of the Senate lobby investigating committee are playing politics in connection with the probe was made here today by Republican Senator Nelson. Nelson made the charge in behalf of his colleagues when Senator Cummins read a telegram from J. J. McClure of New Jersey, asking permission to appear before the committee to make the testimony of Colonel Mulhall in connection with his last campaign for representative.

Nelson pointed out that Mulhall skipped two years in relating events in his confession so as to bring to the attention of the committee the campaign for election waged by McClure. Mulhall's story now deals with the closing days of the Republican campaign in 1903. "We had orders to elect the Republicans at any cost," he said, "and we did it. I was told to work without taking my clothes off, and for several days I slept in them."

TALES OF HORROR

French Diplomat Leaves to Investigate Atrocities of the Bulgarians.

United Press Telegram.
ATHENS, July 18.—The secretary of the French legation and associates left here this morning to visit the district where the Greeks claim the worst of the Bulgarian atrocities occurred. The section said it had been in vain, and thousands of dollars worth of damage done. It is pointed out here that never have such charges as the Greeks are making against the Bulgarians been made in civilized warfare.

Stories told by witnesses are to the effect that hundreds of women and girls have been outraged before their husbands and then burned to death. At Doiran, 3,000 Muslems were slaughtered before the Bulgarians began their retreat. The fact that the bodies were made public, tell of cruelties that not only occurred during the last month but during the last 12 months.

Plymouth Coal Co. Makes Charge Before Commerce Commission.

United Press Telegram.
WASHINGTON, July 18.—A complaint of the New York public as the weather changes from day to day that shippers are unable to tell what kind of coal to send to the market, according to a statement filed here this morning by the Plymouth Coal Company of Conneltsville. The complaint charges that the New York public is being misled by the Plymouth Coal Company before the Interstate Commerce Commission. The company protests against the system of demurrage employed, stating that it has to keep special locomotives on hand to push coal to the New York market after the New Yorkers have made up their minds as to the variety they require.

LAKE ORE RATES.

The suggestion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the Pittsburgh Steel Company case, that the railroads equalize the rate on iron ore from the lower lake ports to the Pittsburgh and Wheeling districts, has been met by the railroads in a manner truly heroic. They suggest that instead of the present rate of 30 cents per ton to Pittsburgh, and 50 cents per ton to Wheeling, the rate be made 33 cents per ton to both districts.

This is a big advance for the Wheeling rate, a small reduction for the Pittsburgh rate and a handsome advance in revenue for the railroads. In the latter respect it resembles the decision of the railroads concerning the Chicago rate on coke from the Connelville furnace, which formerly was $2.35 for furnace coke and $2.75 for foundry coke. The railroads equalized these rates by making the flat rate $2.50 to Chicago. It was then discovered that 95% of the Chicago coke was furnace coke and the small remainder foundry coke. Comparing the proportions with the rates it was discovered that the railroads had managed to advance their rates 27 cents or about 10%.

The railroads are repeating this smooth trick in handling the ore cases. If our advice is accurate the Wheeling district takes approximately 4,200,000 tons of ore annually, the Pittsburgh district takes about 15,000,000 tons of ore, 7,000,000 tons of which is transported by the Bessemer & Lake Erie, the railroad controlled by the corporation; 4,000,000 tons more are shipped to Steel Corporation furnaces over independent railway lines; and 4,000,000 tons are hauled by the same independent lines, steel and iron interests. Assembling these figures, and eliminating the ore hauled over the Bessemer & Lake Erie line, we find that other lines haul 3,000,000 tons to Pittsburgh at a revenue of $7,500,000, and that the line to Wheeling district at a revenue of $2,500,000, making an aggregate of 10,000,000 tons of ore yielding a gross revenue of $10,000,000, or an average of 33 cents per ton, whereas it is proposed to give the ore consumers a rate of 33 cents. The Interstate Commerce Commission will hardly agree to this proposition.

The Pittsburgh consumers of lake ore expected a rate of 55 or 70 cents and hoped that the 50 cent rate might prevail, and they were disappointed in this view by the rate on ore to the fronton district, Zanesville and Columbus, points practically the same distance from the lake as Pittsburgh have a rate of 50 cents per ton. This point, it seems, was not brought out at the hearing, but it will doubtless find a front seat in the subsequent proceedings.

The Pittsburgh district will secure justice if it stands pat and insists upon as much consideration as Wheeling has hitherto enjoyed in securing its supplies and in getting justice for itself. Wheeling will have to stand with Pittsburgh.

THE LOBBYIST.

The lobbyist has been associated in the public mind with paid agents whose business it is to secure votes by doubtful means for legislation of doubtful character; but the attempt of President Wilson and some of the Democratic statesmen at Washington to put the tag of the lobbyist upon all and every person or persons whatsoever, who have or may try to influence by perfectly proper methods the votes of members of the Congress on pending bills, which they consider in whole or in part wrong in principle or unjust to them personally, has brought about the classification of the lobbyist into honest and dishonest. One of the public virtues of the honest lobbyist is thus outlined by the New York Commercial:

"Slipshod methods of drafting bills submitted to Congress and the Legislatures, and the willingness of some of our lawmakers to father strike bills force all classes of the business community to watch the progress of legislation closely. The lobbyist, therefore, becomes quite as essential as is Congress or a Legislature. The conflict of laws is bad enough now. It would be ten times worse were legislative and congressional courtesy allowed to run wild with all manner of fool bills would be put on the statute books by common assent of members too lazy to study their meaning. Lobbyists have not always been inculcated, but some of the greatest triumphs of constructive legislation have been the outcome of honest lobbying."

It is a pity we did not have more of this kind of lobbyist at Harrisburg during the session of the Pennsylvania Legislature just closed. They were needed. A great many "fool bills" and some that were more vicious than foolish got past through legislative courtesy and inattention to legislative duty. Some of the measures which were considered most came out worst. The Supreme Court has already declared one law unconstitutional and other similar deliveries are certain to follow.

Why, even our Commission Government bill for third class cities is under accusation of being rugged, wretched and utterly reckless of the limitations of the higher law.

Dunbar has a brilliant and successful business that only makes a big noise now and then. The excellent quality of the Dunbar fireworks put off in Connelville on the occasion of the feast day of Our Lady of Mount Carmel warrants the prediction that they will prove big sellers, provided they are properly advertised.

The Recall of the Ambassador to Mexico is not strange to politics. He is a Republican.

SCHOOLS NEXT SUBJECT.

In the good old days of action the Chamber of Commerce was something of a debating society, but since its business has been confined to the inner circle it has grown away from the people and lost its skill in the public forum, and its place has been taken by the Municipal League.

Having just completed the task of dissecting the Clark bill and discovering in its multitudinous defects which it is now proposed to remedy by amendments to the courts, it is announced that the next subject of debate will be the Connelville School Board. Special inquiry will be made into charges of extravagant management and the alleged congestion in the grade schools which it is claimed will oblige the children of some of the wards to walk long distances to school in the other wards.

In order that the accused may have a fair trial they have been invited to present and lend new joy to the occasion. It will doubtless be made warm for them, but perhaps they had better stand up and defend themselves boldly.

The banking abilities of the Kuhns have come in for severe criticism from the public with more prejudice than information. In view of this fact it might not be out of place to mention that the First-Second National Bank was never controlled and dominated by the Kuhns; that until recently it was not even controlled by the Kuhns, but was controlled by the Pittsburgh Bank for Savings and the First National Bank of New York, both of which are now admitted to be perfectly solvent and wholly sound. It seems that the worst mistake the Kuhns made was in trying to remedy a situation not of their making.

The old Confederate Capital is too old-fashioned for the split skirt. Some of the old-fashioned notions are still the best notions.

The B. & O. proposes to distribute its coal and coke cars on a tonnage basis. This new rule of proportionment will doubtless find favor with most of the roads. "A car is a car," was the old rule; and the rule is still good, but some cars are bigger than others.

Public duty is often only a convenient term for political interest.

The plague of deluge seems to hover over the West Virginia Panhandle and Eastern Ohio. If it keeps up much longer the people will begin to seriously think of putting bathtub bottoms on their houses.

The Balkan war is getting almost as hideous as the Balkan gowns and neckwear.

The luxurious Appropriation hedges grown with so much care and possibly some grafting is being trimmed by the Governor. The artistic character of the job will be determined later when the detail work is perfected.

The March floods in Ohio and surrounding made a noticeable mark on the semi-annual railroad reports.

The warring Balkan allies have wakened up the Turk, who is disposed to jump back and take another hand in the game. It's a mean people who won't stay licked.

It is just being discovered that as a city proposition Connelville is in a class by itself. The First City of Fayette is nothing if not classy.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad protects the West Virginia coal business for the simple reason that the B. & O. gets the business.

Ponderous Personages.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Swast."

Alexander the Great was born in Macedonia, B. C. 356. He was one of King Philip's sons, No. 15, Series B, and was so handsome and accomplished that his loving father got jealous of him and tried to ventilate him with a spear during a social session of the Anagnanated Sons of Thunder, at which a large number of legs had been tapped.

At this time Macedonia is being paved over by many armies to its great damage, but at that time it was light-weight champion of the fighting world and everybody treated it with respect. When Alexander became regent at the age of 16, he organized the justly celebrated Macedonian phalanx and routed over his enemies so successfully that in a few months he was boss of Greece and was able to appoint a personal friend postmaster of Athens.

Alexander at this time was beautiful, accomplished and witty. He was a fine swordsman and had been educated by Aristotle. Every Greek motor society in Hellas was crazy to pledge him, but he stuck to business and organized an army for the conquest of Persia.

At this time Persia stretched almost all over the far east and was fifty times as large as Greece with an army which would have been known as Wilhelm's look small and lonesome. But Alexander didn't care. He took over 70,000 foot soldiers and 7,000 cavalry and when he met Darius with a million troops and a whole fleet of elephants he tunneled through the opposition time and again with oniro success. Alexander's men killed Persians until they got cramps in their wrists and Alexander sent Darius home on ice and took over the country.

At this time Alexander was 25 years old, and his army showed little sign of wear. He conquered Egypt, India, Persia and other miscellaneous countries, but finally ran out of enemies, owing to the extremely limited information contained in the geographical atlas of that time and after weeping bitterly because he had no foes left to swat, he came back to Persia and settled down to a quiet married life with several of the fairest princesses of the realm.

At the age of 33 Alexander died of fever. Even if he had lived longer there was nothing left for him to do but sit at a desk and run the country. When we realize how pitiful it would have been to see the conqueror of the whole world and the most expert swordsman in history, getting down behind a desk for twelve hours a day and wrapping his legs around a chair while trying to sign his name to a commission appointing an assistant weather observer at Babel-Mandeb, we can understand the kindness of Providence in removing Alexander before the politicians got at him.

"Weeping bitterly because he had no enemies left to swat."

Either Alexander was the greatest general the world has ever known or they had press agents in those days who make ours look dumb and bashful.

Coming Out Into the Open.

It was not so many years ago that advertising was considered unethical from a business standpoint.

Many of the finest old houses held aloft, saying that they didn't have to advertise. Even today there are some business and professional men so bound by custom and tradition that they have not yet availed themselves of the advantages of Advertising.

By so much as these customs still hold, by just so much is the public deprived of knowing all about those professions and businesses. The most successful way and the only honest way to deal with the public is to "play the game out in the open."

If there are true and interesting reasons why the public should buy something from So & So, then So & So should be glad of a chance to say so over and over again through the medium of reliable newspapers.

COST IN DOLLARS AND HUMAN LIVES

Scientists Say Fly Costs Us
Over $100,000,000 a Year.

DISEASE FOLLOWS THE PEST

Methods of Exterminating Deadly Insect Are Bringing Satisfactory Results in Nearly Every City—Minnesota Entomologists Report a Model

Figured out in money, to say nothing of the loss in human life, the cost to the United States annually of supporting its fly population amounts to $127,000,000, say government experts who have been making a study of the results of the insect spreading activities of the insects.

It is estimated that the fly is responsible for an expenditure of $50,000,000 for the handling of tuberculous cases, attributable to germs spread by the pest, while $70,000,000 represents the cost of typhoid fever cases, originating in the same way. As a carrier of intestinal fever and summer complaint diseases and a transmitting agency of dysentery the fly, scientists say, must be charged with an expenditure of $7,000,000 for the care of these diseases.

The statistics and the realization that thousands of human lives are being sacrificed annually because no method has been devised for exterminating the fly explain why health officials generally and the health departments of practically every municipality this summer are making active efforts to arouse citizens to the importance of keeping the pests away from their food supplies and places of habitation.

Results Are Gratifying.

Satisfactory results are being obtained in nearly every city where anti-fly campaigns are in progress. In almost every one there has been a noticeable falling off in the size of the pest horde, a fact that is almost daily commented upon by the inspectors of the local health departments.

In most cities the warfare on the fly was inaugurated with a cleanup campaign. After that the method consisted principally of bringing to the attention of citizens by means of educational posters, letters and newspaper articles suggestions for fly eradication that had been tried out with success previously.

A bulletin issued by the state entomologist of Minnesota embodies most of the methods by which a deadly pest may be exterminated and is a model for cities conducting or planning an anti-fly crusade.

"In the early spring clear up all refuse heaps, filth of all kinds, manure piles, garbage heaps, old cans, trash of every sort and abolish as far as possible other places where flies may breed," states the report of the Minnesota entomologist. "Screens should be used freely on all doors and windows. The prompt disposal of garbage should be arranged for, and will barrels and garbage cans should be tightly closed. Use some form of fly trap with the proper bait and continuously place it where it will do the most good."

Other Precautionary Measures.

Other precautions suggested by the Minnesota official and endorsed by health authorities everywhere are the following:

"Do not build a stable near dwelling house; arrange for prompt removal of stable manure from your vicinity and keep manure covered and in dark until removed. Keep your premises clean, as free as possible from filth of all kinds, slop water, garbage and refuse heaps. If your neighbor allows such nuisances upon his own premises complain of him to your board of health."

"A safe and effective poison is made by adding three teaspoonfuls of formalin in a pint of half milk and half water. This is particularly useful where flies do not have access to other sources of moisture. It should be kept out of the reach of children and might be placed in a Mason fruit jar inverted in a shallow dish and so arranged as to feed the liquid into the dish as fast as needed, or it might be poured into an open dish and placed near the sink or wherever flies gather. Other sources of moisture should be kept away from them."

TRAINED PARROT FOUND THAT BEATS SCARECROW.

Polly Cries "Get Out, Get Out!" and Crows Flee.

Aaron Doughty, a farmer of Harpswell Center, lower Casco bay, in Maine, believes he has solved the problem of keeping the crows out of his cornfields. The corn that grows in that vicinity attains unusual size and sweetness. The farmers get big prices for their product and are obliged to wage continual warfare against the crows. The latter are unusually bold this year and seem to have little fear of dead members of their kind swung from bean poles or from other scarecrows of time honored type.

Driven to desperate measures, Mr. Doughty bought a parrot and for a month devoted himself to teaching the bird to chase crows away from his cornfields. Every time he saw a crow he would start running toward it, waving his arms and loudly shouting "Get out, get out!"

Polly was an interested observer and in no time was screaming, "Get out, get out!"

When the bird had learned that the farm was his home Mr. Doughty experimented in giving Polly his liberty when he chased crows. As he hoped, the imitative parrot flew after him, ravenously crying its warning. It went even further.

Mr. Doughty had not expected the bird would do anything but fly toward the field, thus frightening the crows away with his mysterious human sounding words. But Polly entered into the spirit of the thing in a way that exceeded all expectations. He not only flew to the cornfield, but kept right on after the retreating crows, chasing them sometimes a quarter of a mile before returning to the cage. Polly developed a particular hatred for the crow family.

One of Polly's favorite tricks is to walk slowly through the grass until nearly in the midst of a flock. Polly certainly gives the crows a shock when he jumps into the air after them, his brilliant plumage shining in the sun, shrilly shrieking "Get out, get out!"

The crows are deserting Mr. Doughty's fields for those of other farmers where the worst they have to contend with is some effigy of a tramp they know by instinct to be harmless or, in rare instances, a barefooted country boy with a rusty shotgun.

Merchants' factories from near and far are flocking to the Doughty farm to watch Polly do his stunt.

U. S. TO ISSUE A MAGAZINE.

Journal of Research Will Replace Certain Agricultural Bulletins.

Radical changes in the publications of the department of agriculture are to be made in connection with the establishment by the department and the agricultural colleges and experimental stations of the country of the Journal of Research. This magazine, which will be issued monthly or oftener, according to the volume of scientific matter on hand, will do away with the technical bulletins which have been issued in the past. It will be edited by three representatives from the department and two from colleges and stations.

Publication of farmers' bulletins will be continued by the department, but in many instances the pamphlets will deal with problems affecting a particular section of the country. Other publications of broad general interest will be spread over the whole country.

Century Old Express Safe Found in a Stone Wall.

While repairing the state highway at the top of Conococheague mountain, near Concord, Md., Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open, and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stagecoaches.

A CZAR IN AN ATTIC.

Room in the Winter Palace Where Emperor Nicholas I. Died.

The Winter palace of the czar surpasses any other palace in Europe. It is on the banks of the Neva and owes its existence to the Empress Catherine II, that most extraordinary woman, extraordinary in ability and in vice, the surprise of all her contemporaries and the wonder of all who have studied her character. The building is four stories high, of a light brown color and highly ornamental in architecture. It is a wilderness of halls, stairways and apartments. The Nicholas hall and the St. George's hall will never be forgotten by those who have seen them.

One of the most interesting rooms is that where Nicholas I. died. It is in the upper story of the north-east corner of the building and is approached by four doors and finally by a narrow passage. It is a small room, only about eighteen feet long and twelve feet wide, with two small windows, and is the place where the emperor spent most of his time when not officially employed. It is the room in which he died, some say by poison administered by himself in a fit of melancholy induced by the outcome of the Crimean war.

The room remains just as he left it. Near the center is a plain iron bedstead. Some chairs and a few cheap pictures adorn the room, and a disparted, down at the heel pair of slippers complete the furnishings of the attic room in the palace.

Peace Congress Plans.

The program for the world's peace congress at The Hague, which takes place next month, has been approved by the special committee of arrangements at Paris. The congress will be called to order at 9:30 a. m. on Aug. 20. The formal speeches will occupy the forenoon. In the afternoon the first business session will be held. These will continue through the three succeeding days.

WINDOW GLASS DECAYS.

It Gets So Brittle in Time That It May Be Cut With Shears.

It is generally supposed that glass is practically immortal. But it has been demonstrated that glass exposed to the elements will decay and in time become so rotten that it is worthless.

Window glass exposed to the heat and cold and varying winds will, after a number of years, become so brittle that it can be cut with a pair of shears. It is said that light and darkness have different effects on glass, and this alteration alone will cause it to become fragile and in time worthless.

It is almost impossible to remove old windows from a building without breaking many of the panes of glass. New glass can be handled with much more carelessness.

There is a certain elasticity to new glass that leaves glass which has faded the weather for a number of years. Street fakery who travel throughout the country selling scissors will obtain a lot of old window glass and show the crowds how wonderfully their shears will cut by clipping off strips of the glass just as a person would cut paper, when in fact the feat is due to the fact that the glass is actually rotten. —Harper's Weekly.

The WOMAN

A Novel by Albert Payson Terhune

Founded on William C. de Mille's Play
Illustrated with Photos from the Play and Drawings by K. L. Davis

His fierce appeal broke off in a cry of pain. He had at last raised her head and read it. For the first time since he had stupified, expressionless. Then, cautiously, half-creeping, as if expecting a blow, he moved back to Van Dyke.

"Why, Grace?" exclaimed Blake, in a pitiful bravado. "You're crazy! You don't know what you're implying—what you're letting them think. I won't believe it. Not a word of it. It's a trick to—"

She caught his shaking hand and murmured a broken incoherent syllable or two amid the passion of her sob.

"Almighty!" Blake's legs gave way and he sprawled inert into a chair, his head on his breast. He had all at once grown old—very, very old. Meanwhile, Robertson had forced his own dazed brain back into a semblance of the former strong control.

"Van Dyke," he said as calmly as if he were giving a routine order, "you will have every trace of this story destroyed tonight. It must never get beyond this room. I can count on you."

"Certainly," agreed Van Dyke with equal coolness.

There was no hint in his voice or in his manner that Mark's command entailed the defeat of a bill, the collapse of millions of dollars worth of stocks, a probable panic on Wall Street and the money interests total of temporary loss of power in Congress. For the moment, the great corporation lawyer seemed to be also a man.

On his way from the room, Van Dyke paused beside Blake's chair. "Jim," he said hesitatingly, "I'm going over to the capitol. Shall I tell Mullins to let the bill come to a vote?"

"Yes," answered Blake, without stopping or so much as looking up. "Yes," he said again, and his voice was dead. "Yes—I'm in luck."

As Van Dyke opened the door, Wanda made as though to follow him.

"If you don't need me any further, Mr. Blake," she said gruffly, "I'll go."

Blake lifted a palsied hand in negation.

"In there," he muttered, pointing toward the door that led to the inner room. "I must speak to you—afterward."

When the old man raised his eyes, Mark and Grace alone were left in the room with him. Robertson was standing motionless unseeing. Grace's sobs broke the tense silence, as she fought weakly for self-control. Blake crossed over to her. She rose at his approach. "Daughter," said Blake, almost timidly, "they're all gone. None of them will tell. But there's one thing we've got to know. I'm with you, no matter what you've done. But—tell me—that—that this was all over and—done with—before you married Mark!"

"Father!" The woman faced him in dry-eyed horror. Every trace of weeping was seared away by the flame of sudden indignation. And, at the sight, Jim Blake gave a great wordless cry and gathered her into his arms as though she were a baby.

"Oh, my little girl!" he choked. "Dad's own, own little girl! We've been tearing your poor heart to pieces and you old father was the bitterest against you. It's all right. I tell you, girl. It's all right. Dad'll see you through. You shan't be bothered. There, there! Oh, don't cry like that, darling. Don't!"

His voice grew husky. Leaving her abruptly, he crossed to Robertson.

"Mark," he faltered, avoiding his son-in-law's eye, "you promised to protect her. This is the time to do it. It was for better, for worse. If that vow is any good at all, it's a good for worse as for better. Mark—be gentle with her, boy."

He seemed about to say more. But, glancing furtively at Mark's set, changeless face, he forbore.

Slowly, with bent shoulders and dragging step Blake made his way to the big room's farthest end. There, in the window's embrasure, out of earshot, his back to the others, he halted.

Drawing aside the curtains he glanced out into the night. The gloom of the sleeping city was below and around him. But, in one black mass, there upon the roof of garish lights glowed. There, in the capitol, the Mullins bill was coming to a vote. There, Matthew Standish, freed by a miracle from the toll that cratler men had woven about him, was winning the victory which was to clear for him the pathway to the very summit of political power.

But he found his subconscious self straying from the picture he was so ruthlessly drawing. His mind would not fix itself on the lighted capitol and the wreck of his life-work; but crept over back into the dim room behind him. Even his tongue tricked him. For when he would have made it recite further the tale of his losses, it muttered brokenly:

"My own little girl! Dad's own, own little girl!"

CHAPTER XXII

The Hour of Reckoning. Mark Robertson and his wife, left alone, together in the other end of the great library, faced the situation for which Grace had so long been preparing and for which her frightened years of preparation had proved so useless.

He knew. That was all. And no word of hers could gloss over or make bearable the truth. Wherefore she spoke no word, but stood looking at him; taking in every detail of the stout figure and the strong common-place face as though she wished to carry with her forever their memory.

Mark strove for speech. But for the first time in his roughly aggressive career, suitable words were denied him. Alternately he longed to tell her in naked terms what she was and how utterly he despised her. Again, a gust of self-pity urged him to reproach her for the wrecking of his ideals, the blasting of his happiness. Vanity coming part way to his aid, he framed and left unspoken—unstirred sentence of sorrow. And, in the end, all he could say was:

"Why didn't you tell me?"

It was not what he had intended to say. It was banal. It expressed none of the stark moods that seethed in him. Yet as she did not answer, he found himself asking once more:

"Why didn't you tell me?"

And now, unknown and uninvited for, there crept into his bald question a note that was almost of entreaty. And at the sound, the dumb devil that had locked Grace's lips departed.

"Tell me!" she echoed. "Oh, if you knew how I've wanted to!"

"Then—"

"I didn't dare. I didn't dare."

"Truth and honor surely—"

"Your love meant more to me than truth and honor. I sacrificed them to keep it. I would sacrifice them and everything else to get it back. Is that shameful? Perhaps. The truth usually is. If I had told you, you wrong. I have cheated you. I admit it, and I'll accept the consequences. It is in the blood. There is much in heredity. My father is a politician. I don't know who my grandfather was. And if he had been worth knowing about, I'd know. There is a bad strain running through the family. It dropped out in me. Yes, I have cheated you. You had the right to demand in our bargain the hard-and-fast terms the world has decreed: All of a wife's life in exchange for a frayed and battered remnant of her husband's. I can't meet those terms, though I tried to fool you into believing I could. So I must merely give up the love whose price I can't pay. Don't let's make it harder by having a scene over it. Good night. I'll stay with father until you can decide just what you want to do and on what basis we're to separate. If it would do any good to ask your forgiveness I'd ask it. That's all. Good night, Mark."

She held out her hand with a shy wistfulness. He was staring straight into her tortured eyes and did not see the gesture. The hand dropped back limply to her side, and she moved to rejoin Blake.

But at the first step, Mark barred her way. She looked at him in tired wonder. His face was set and hard. He made no move to touch her. His voice, when he spoke, grated like a file, as he forced it between his unwilling lips.

"Grace," he began, "I've told you my love is dead. And I lied when I said it. I planned to put you out of my life. And even while I planned I knew I couldn't do it. It doesn't matter what I want to do or what I ought to do. Out of all this hideous tangle, blame forth just one thing that I must do whether I want to or not. I must go on loving you with all my strength and life."

"Do you mean," she panted wildly, "do you mean that you can—that you will—"

"I mean," he cried brokenly, his self-control smothering to atoms under the hammer blows of his heart, "I mean there is nothing in all this world for me, dear love, away from you! I love you. And I can't go on without you. You are earth and heaven and hell to me. I love you. And I have forgotten everything but that. Girl of my heart, will you let me make you forget, too? Oh, I love you! I love you!"

CHAPTER XXIII

The Victory.

"They didn't seem exactly to be hankering after my society in there," observed Wanda Kelly, "so I came back."

Jim Blake turned from the window at sound of the telephone girl's purposely raised voice. Just within the threshold from the inner rooms of the suite, Wanda, with elaborate care, was shutting the door behind her.

Blake glanced quickly about the room.

"Yes," said Wanda, answering the question in his look and jerking her pretty head back in the direction of the rooms she had just quitted. "In there, I wouldn't worry if I were you."

Jim Blake's grim face took on a light as inconspicuous as the play of sunset rays on a mummy. The mask of age and defeat seemed to melt beneath it. He took an eager step toward the inner door.

"Just a minute," Wanda halted him. "You asked me to wait. If you don't need me here any longer—"

"Yes," hesitated Blake, trouble flitting across the new light in his eyes. "I wanted to ask you—not to let Tom know about this. His sister—"

"I'll never tell him," she promised. "I sent him away so he wouldn't find out."

"You're white, clear through," grudgingly admitted Blake. "Will you do one thing more?"

"What?"

"Bring him back to me."

"If I meet him again," she assented primly, "I'll send—"

"I didn't say 'send,'" corrected Blake, "I said 'bring.'"

"That's different. I—"

"I'm out of politics. My own game has broken me at last. I'm old. I know it now. I never did tell tonight. I'm old and I want my children around me."

"I'll tell Tom," she agreed, softened despite herself by the new suppleness in a voice that had never before been turned to the uses of entreaty. "I'll tell him. I'm sure he'll come back to you—when he understands. Good night, Mr. Blake."

"There's another thing," he broke in roughly, staying her departure, "a thing that isn't easy to say."

"Then, why say it?"

"Because," he growled, "like all things that aren't easy to say, it's a thing that's got to be said. Miss Kelly, hasn't tonight pretty nearly cleared the old debt between you and moi? You and yours have suffered a lot at my hands. But, after what's happened here this evening, I guess you'll admit, as far as suffering goes, you haven't got much on me. Haven't I paid? Won't you say we're square?"

"We're—we're square, Mr. Blake," she returned in a tone she could not make wholly steady nor impersonal.

"And," pursued Blake, "and—Tom?"

"That's different, too," she faltered.

The jangle of the telephone interrupted her. Blake, who was beside the desk, picked up the instrument.

"Hello," he called into the transmitter. "Ye—ye—she's here. Who wants her? Oh! Yes, put him on this wire."

He lowered the telephone. "Some one to speak to you, Miss Kelly," he reported.

Mechanically, she took up the receiver, and, by long habit, her voice took its professional drone:

"Hello!" she called.

Then, turning on Blake, in surprise, she cried:

"Why, it's Tom!"

"Yes," drawled Blake, "So I gather from the name."

clear down to the ground. For both of you. Tell him so, won't you?"

The winter sun was butting its way over the eastern sky-line. The dawn was bitter-cold, mercilessly clear.

And into the track of the first white glittering rays walked a tired man. A man who that night had won a mighty victory. A victory that foreshadowed the richest gifts his country could bestow.

Before him the future stretched bright as that winter's dawn. As dazzlingly brilliant, and as cold and starkly empty.

In Matthew Standish's ears, as he returned toward the loveless abode that he hated to call home, still rang echoes of the pandemonium that had broken loose in the house when the Mullins bill had gone down to defeat. His arms still ached from the pump-handling a host of shrieking admirers had forced on him.

"There is only one lasting victory," he muttered disjunctively to himself, as he moved onward in the dazzling leaden light. "At the last, it won't be the world's applause that the world's great men will remember. It will be the love smile of a Woman. And—I shall never have known that memory. What is the rest worth?" (THE END.)

MESSIAH'S KINGDOM.

The Glorious Day of Divine Favor Is Nearing.

The period in which sin is permitted has been a dark night to humanity, never to be forgotten; but the glorious day of righteousness and divine favor is soon to be ushered in by Messiah. He, as the SUN OF RIGHT-ROUSINESS, shall arise and shine fully and clearly into and upon all, bringing healing and blessing, which will more than counterbalance the dreadful night of weeping, sighing, pain, sickness and death, in which the groaning creation has been so long. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the MORNING."

EQUAL TO OCCASIONS.

A Man of Quick Wit and Prompt Action Was Lord Whitworth.

Lord Whitworth, who held various posts of honor in English diplomatic circles, was a kindly, gracious gentleman as well as a wit and a man of the world. He had indeed almost measured swords with Napoleon at the Tuilleries when that despot rallied at England for not having evacuated Egypt and Malta, accused her of having violated treaties and ended by flourishing a cane dangerously near the face of the English ambassador.

Lord Whitworth put his hand on the hilt of his sword.

"What would you have done if the emperor had struck you?" he was afterward asked.

"I would have felled him to the ground," was the quiet answer.

Perhaps the best story told of him is one showing how his quick wit disposed of a rival. When he was at the Russian court, Fox sent there as a sort of ambassador of his own a man named Adair, the son of a surgeon.

One day the empress, speaking in French, said to Lord Whitworth: "Is he a very important man, this M. Adair?"

"Not so very, madame," replied Lord Whitworth, "although his father was a grand surgeon; a remark which readers of French will recognize as a very good pun, for the word used by Lord Whitworth means 'blood letter,' while by its sound it also meant a great lord."

"Discovery."

According to some wonder mongers, whenever you tell a story asserting the existence of something new and astonishing you "discover" it. But that is not the sense in which the word is used by scientific investigators. When Professor and Mme. Curie "discovered" the wonderful element "radium" they placed it so to speak, "on the table," and every one has been able to examine it and to prove that the statements made about it are true. When Dr. Laveran of Paris "discovered" that malarial fever is due to a parasite in the blood he showed the parasite and showed how one can always find it, and thus he enabled any one and every one to see it and to examine its relation to malarial fever. Those are instances of "discovery." Mere guesses and assertions without proof are not "discovery."

Strain Counts in Chickens.

What is the best breed of chickens? Easiest question in the world. Ask your friends and every one of them can answer right off hand, but each one will name a different breed or variety and when you ask their reasons for their choice, mighty few of said reasons would hold in court.

The fact of the matter is that there is no one "best breed" of chickens. There are four or five "best breeds," with from two to seven "best varieties" in each breed. If you don't believe it, glance through the files of any poultry journal and see the number of "best breeds" mentioned in their free reading notices.

One man proves that the White Orpingtons are the "best breed," because he got Mme. Paderewski to admit she paid $5,000 for five of his chickens.

Another man clinches the pennant for the White Plymouth Rocks by saying that a pair of 30 hens earned $3,500 for him last year, their eggs selling for $30 a setting. And so it goes.
